

Anna Gili is a PhD student in Linguistic, Philological and Literary Sciences at the University of Padua and at the Graduiertenschule für die Geisteswissenschaften (Julius-Maximilians-Universität Würzburg). She obtained a master's degree in Classical Philology and Ancient History at the University of Padua and, at the same time, attended the Galileiana School of Higher Education. Her main research interest is the transmission of medical science from Greek into Arabic and from Arabic into Latin during the Middle Ages. Her PhD project, entitled "Pathology in the Kitāb al-Malakī, the Pantegni and the Liber Regalis: Theorica, books VIII and IX.1-2; 35-39. Critical edition, translation, and commentary of the Arabic text and the two Latin translations" aims to critically edit and study the books on pathology in the Kitāb al-Malakī, composed by 'Alī ibn al-'Abbas al-Mağūsī (second half of the 10th c.), and in its two Latin translations – the Pantegni, by Constantine the African (late 11th c.), and the Liber Regalis, by Stephen of Antioch (early 12th c.).